

In All That We Humans Must Abide

In all that we humans must abide, the most trying is often that of other humans opposing us in one way or another. The weather we cannot change, but human behavior IS an element of our environment that CAN be changed ... through love, patience, and promoting greater understanding of the Principles of Justice that promote Peace and Prosperity for us the People who need good government.

It is that “understanding” where we too often fall short of our objective, where we miss the mark, where we put our personal agenda and opinions ahead of that which promises the “greater good” we all desire ... a world governed by Order by which each of us can abide together in peace and safety.

The anger disease infecting many saddens me deeply. As I see the vast potential offered to us by the internet connection that has only in the past few decades made it possible for each of us to share our hopes and struggles, a gloomy sorrow nearly overthrows me with its flooding negativity. Where on the one hand we now have a mighty tool to carry forward the dream of all mankind, we somehow find ourselves succumbing to the darkness that insidiously attempts to crowd our dreams into hopelessness.

PLEASE take the “high road” on the information highway. Be kind. Be positive. Believe in the good too many died to give you. And play your part in the Holy Experiment that is these United States of America.

If you want Peace and Prosperity, promote Justice and defend The Rule of Law!

Tell people you won't listen to propaganda that undermines public confidence in The Rule of Law and due process that are the “Power of the People” that secures human happiness by guaranteeing Liberty through the mechanism of Justice!

Give thanks for the unnamed millions who died to preserve The Rule of Law and your due process power.

Thank God you live these United States of America.

Use your due process “Power of the People” wisely and teach others.

Do it for the children!
